Police See Him PickLocks in Good Cause

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The state police today picked up a man who had been picked up by the state police in a resort hotel at Long Beach, Calif., under the state emergency housing act to provide shelter for persons made homeless by a recent fire.

When Pauline Goldman, manager of the President hotel apartments, refused to give Walter Van Nostrand, representative of the state division of housing, the keys to the apartments, Van Nostrand summoned Abe Kupchick, 54-year-old locksmith.

Kupchick removed the locks and replaced them with new ones. Miss Goldman called police, but the police said state authorities had no proper authorization papers and remained to watch Kupchick work.

Five families were housed late that night, and nine others assigned.

Kupchick said this was "certainly something new for me—a wholesale locksmithing job, with the government looking on."

'Decentralization' IsGiven British Dominions

LONDON. — British Commonwealth leaders have decided to maintain "decentralization" in the new dominions.

The decision, announced at the end of a five-week empire conference recently, emphasized the autonomy of the dominions and formally marked the end of acknowledged United Kingdom predominance.

62 Fat Hogs Go to MarketBut Their Cash Goes Also

CHICAGO. — James D. Hensley and Marvin C. Moore brought 62 big fat hogs to market from Lebanon, Ind., in their new truck.

The next day they didn't have the hogs, the $1,340 they got for selling them or their truck.

After the farmers had auctioned off the hogs they drove their truck on an alley to park and were confronted by three men.

"We're sheriff's men," said one of the trio. "We want to see if everything's all right."

The gunmen went through Hensley and Moore's pockets, took the $1,340 hog funds, said "everything's all right," and drove away in the new truck.

"They weren't so smart," Hensley told central police in reporting the holdup. "They missed $1,000 from another trip I had in my shoes."

Many amendments are being included in the new OPA bill before the Senate.
